Toenails

Gunfire

Alligators

Maybe the reason Lucy put her shoes on in the song was she forgot to paint her toenails and looked around Hope and felt positively undressed.

For the best five-sentence punch in the telegraph wires this year I nominate Associated Press item of just Thursday:

St. Louis, July 23.—City Coroner Patrick Taylor was questioning a witness at a murder inquest.

"Where were you when the first shot was fired?" he asked.

"Down at the end of the bar," the man replied.

"Where were you when the second shot was fired?"

"What second shot?"

Little Rock reporters made a whale of a story out of the return home yesterday of a party of capital city zoo men with four alligators they captured in Grassy Lake, private hunting preserve west of Hope.

Florida's swamps have nothing on Arkansas when it comes to alligators, according to Arkansas Democrat story, and recites that the four gators measured: Nine and one-half feet for the grown male; nine feet for the female; and a couple of youngsters, three feet and one foot long, respectively.

You get used to Easterners expressing incredulity about there being alligators anywhere except in Florida, but perhaps the other sections of Arkansas aren't as well posted on our southern section as they might be.

Alligators are pretty common across the southern counties. I found that out immediately after going to El Dorado in 1923, there being many lakes east of that city cut out from the Ouachita river.

But probably the best alligator gators are here in our own county. Certainly we barked at the alligator farm at Hot Springs has told hundreds of thousands of out-of-state that the 17-footers "is from Red Lake, in Hempstead county, Arkansas." And certainly the zoo men know the facts, for the experts from the snake house at the St. Louis zoo have been coming down to Grassy lake for years — and now the men from the Little Rock zoo.

One of my prized Kodachrome pictures is a telephone shot I made of a 15-footer lazing in Grassy lake, who exploded into action on instant after the shutter clicked. Thrown on a picture screen he at first looks like a half-sunken log — but when you look closely you see the teeth of his armful plate.

We chased the alligators, used up a day to get the picture, the lake was high, and a boat could move with comparative silence, catching Mr. Alligator "at home."

It's a fascinating scene, I don't give a darn about hunting, but I think Grassy Lake is one of the zoological wonderlands of America.

Ark. Labor Front Breaks Even

By The Associated Press

This has been an action-packed week for organized labor in Arkansas. It won one dispute and suffered a reversal in litigation.

Two major strikes involving CIO unions were averted, one through negotiation of a new contract that provided for a wage increase. The other dispute is being negotiated.

An AFL union official was held in contempt of court and given what labor apparently regards as a stiff penalty because it plans as to bat for the officials.

Meanwhile, striking employees of the Pierce-Williams basket factor in Jonesboro kept up picketing. The dispute is now in its 67th day. The men and women workers want a 20 per cent wage increase and other concessions. They are affiliated with the AFL.

This is the only active strike in Arkansas at the moment.

Some 400 employees of the Root petroleum refinery in El Dorado won a wage boost amounting to a net of nine cents per hour this week, effective Aug. 1. The workers, members of the CIO oil workers union had voted to strike unless they received more pay. Their present hourly wage scale ranges from $1.04 to $1.88.

The dispute between Reynolds Metals and the CIO Steel workers union has been recessed until July 26. State Labor Commissioner Kelton Call said, if the sides don't reach an agreement in three days, a strike of some employees at Jones Mill, Bauxite and Benton appears likely.

A federal mediator had reported some progress accomplished in talks, but major points haven't yet been discussed.

Call said he hopes that a state conciliation service may be set up to help negotiate labor-management disputes because there is a "definite need" for such an agency in Arkansas. At present, the labor commissioner may sit in on negotiations only by invitation from both sides.

Call fears that there will be more disputes in the future in Arkansas because of the "downward slide in the economic scale."

A court fight involving the AFL's oil field side and the state on the other is brewing as the result of a changeover of oil fields in Fayetteville holding Joe Folsom, Fort Smith AFL union business agent, in contempt of court.

Folsom was fined $1,000 and sentenced to six months in jail for issuing instructions to union oil workers to ignore a no-picketing order issued by Chancellor John K. Butt.

Folsom admitted issuing the instructions, but said he had no intention of violating the court order.

Earlier, Judge Butt had fined and sentenced to jail six union men for picketing a construction project at Fayetteville, in violation of his order.

Last night at the Chamber of Commerce office a small group representing most city organizations discussed possibilities of going along with Arkansas National Guard's proposal that the city enlarge an armory which the state will build so it can be used as a field house.

The group discussed several plans for financing such a project and finally decided to feel out "the people" on the proposal. In today's Star a form will be printed listing suggestions and proposals and tentative plans. Citizens of Hope are asked to fill out this form and return to the Chamber of Commerce office.

Last night the group suggested making the building large enough to house a basketball court, dressing rooms and showers, a stage and seating capacity for 3,000.

4 Alligators Captured in Red, Grassy

Guided by the Toney boys of Fulton officials of the Little Rock City Zoo spent two days on Hope Island Lakes this week and snared four alligators were placed in their new home at Little Rock's fair park zoo yesterday.

Heading the party was zoo director Raymond Gray. They visited Red and Grassy Lakes capturing two nine-foot alligators and two smaller, one three and one-half feet long and the other little more than a foot.

Parks and Recreation superintendent W. K. Abro and his two assistants, Vance Thompson and Raymond Squares accompanied the group.

Lia and Roy Toney and Bill Clay of McNease, led the party to the alligator island. All of these men are old timers in capturing alligators.

Housing Group Approves Blytheville

Blytheville, July 23.—(P)—The public housing administration has approved Blytheville's low cost housing program under terms of the nation's new housing bill.

This was announced yesterday by FHA Director J. Mell Brooks who said the project, expected to cost more than $500,000, call for construction of 94 housing units of one, two and three bedrooms.

Key Figure in 5 Per Centers Case Is III

Washington, July 23.—(UP)—A key figure in Washington's "five per centers" became ill soon after Senate investigators began questioning him, it was disclosed today. He has been under a doctor's care ever since.

He is James V. Hunt, a former lieutenant colonel whose alleged activities as an influence salesman touched off the present investigation by the Senate's super-investigating subcommittee. His namesake diary is the core of the subcommittee's inquiry.

According to reports, Hunt has been ill off and on since the investigation began, and it is not known if he will be well enough to testify when the subcommittee begins public hearings in about 10 days.

His wife told newspapermen who tried to contact him at his home that Hunt is under a doctor's care and too ill to talk on the telephone.

Meanwhile, the Senate subcommittee urged government agencies which possess photostatic copies of Hunt's diary to guard against any further leak of its contents.

The existence of the diary came to light yesterday. The loose-leaf volume reportedly contains a detailed account of all of Hunt's contacts with government officials.

Senate investigators, to whom Hunt voluntarily gave the diary some time ago, revealed that, among others, it contained the names of the two army generals who were suspended from duty because of their alleged connections with the "influence industry."

They were Maj. Gen. Alden H. Wall, chief of the chemical corps and Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman, the quartermaster general.

McMath Tells Indianapolis About Arkansas

Indianapolis, July 23.—(P)—Arkansas is not a spot where the people lounge around white columned verandas sipping mint juleps, but it is a place stirring with a new progressive movement now sweeping south.

Gov. Sid McMath of Arkansas made this statement here last night in an address before the Indiana Young Democrats.

McMath told the group that people above the Mason-Dixon line seldom hear of the south "except when the sheeted hoodmuds of the Ku Klux Klan make their cowardly assault against some defenseless victim" or when the Dixiecrats shout "states rights" as an objection to anything which for any reason they oppose and they oppose almost anything.

He predicted that southern states which now have a poll tax would abolish the matter of their own volition.

The old style southern demagogue who thrived on hate and fear is definitely on his way out," McMath added.

Magnolia Given Nod to Increase Oil Production

Magnolia, July 23.—(P)—Three requests for increase in production allowable's have been approved by the Arkansas Oil and Gas commission.
